Lost Together

The Rembrandts

You always said to listen to your heart-Maybe you were warning me All that I remember is your sirens call... and crashing on your beach I was in pursuit of sunken treasure... drifting so far off my course I should've seen the red sky, in the morning light... and followed my true north Somewhere we got lost together And on this island, found each other In a million years, if ever I could never want another Be careful what you think you're wishing for ... 'cause you know it might come true And happily ever after is an ending, only written for a fool... by a fool

Somewhere we got lost together And on this island, found each other In a million years, if ever I could never want another Stranded on this shore..always wanting more... than I could ever give to you Somewhere we got lost together And on this island, found each other In a million years, if ever I could never want another
