

Fragile, Don't Crush

The Softies

last time I wrote you I meant to say sorry I didn't mean for your eyes to get starry trying to say it got stuck in my throat but I meant every word that I wrote next time I see you I'm sure you'll be better easily past the effects of my letter it looks not so sad written down and it lessens with each passing town it's fragile

fragile like you
like you

breaking your heart was not what I hoped for I've said too much and can't possibly say more maybe that's not being fair so it's lucky I'm here and you're there put it inside your cigar box forever and maybe someday you'll forgive me for never doing what you wanted most but you can't send true love through the post

it's fragile
fragile like you
like you