

After Tea

The Spencer Davis Group

I'll take you to a place with mountains edged with lace
A place where we can find jellybeans and wine
We will drink from golden cups so very old
We can dance to time, chant verses that don't rhyme

Watch now carefully, follow me
We will be there, you and me
Watch now carefully, follow me
We will be there after tea

If thou will devour, one may eat a flower
On toast, a bean filled bun, held up before the sun
The bishop and the baker, the candlestick maker
Danced around in time, danced around in line

Watch now carefully, follow me
We will be there, you and me
Watch now carefully, follow me
We will be there after tea

You may ride a horse, made of wood of course
The wooden horse of Troy in comparison a toy
The rabbit and the goldfish, a very tasty cold dish
Eaten up today, eaten right away

Watch now carefully, follow me
We will be there, you and me
Watch now carefully, follow me
We will be there after tea

Time for you and me, time for you and tea
Time for (Time for you and me, time for you and tea)
You and (Time for you and me, time for you and tea)
Me (Time for you and me, time for you and tea)
Time for (Time for you and me, time for you and tea)
You and (Time for you and me, time for you and tea)
Me (Time for you and me, time for you and tea)

Watch now carefully, follow me
We will be there, you and me
Watch now carefully, follow me
We will be there after tea

Watch now carefully, follow me
We will be there, you and me
Watch now carefully, follow me
We will be there after tea

Watch now carefully, follow me
We will be there, you and me
Watch now carefully, follow me
We will be there after tea
