

Cocoon

Thomas Godoj

Yesterday my mirror on the wall
Said beauty's only skin deep
And the fairest of them all
They risen and then they fall
And you shouldn't judge them by the name
If all of you'd be shadows
Then your looks would be the same
A soul without a frame

Every little seed along the way
Carries something bigger
And it's growing every day
So come whatever may

I know that you're breathing
And it's written in the waves when you're dancing in the moon
I know it ain't easy
And the stars are gonna weep once you're leaving your cocoon, your cocoon, y our cocoon

Give it just a little time and space
Let it breathe and you will see
How things fall into place
That's nature's given trace
Deep within we carry either side
The shape of who we are
There is no day without a night
No shadow without light

Every little step along the way

Takes you somewhere else and new
So don't you be afraid
And step out of the shade

I know that you're breathing
And it's written in the waves when you're dancing in the moon
I know it ain't easy
And the stars are gonna weep once you're leaving your cocoon

Every little seed along the way
Carries something bigger
And it's growing every day
So come whatever may

Every little step along the way
Takes you somewhere else and new
So don't you be afraid
And step out of the shade

I know that you're breathing
And it's written in the waves when you're dancing in the moon
I know it ain't easy
And the stars are gonna weep once you're leaving your cocoon, your cocoon, y
our cocoon

And the stars are gonna weep once you're leaving your cocoon
