One Degree Down

Threshold

No sense in admitting I'm weary from the wait
No sense in pretending that
I'm pressing on the gate
No power in a promise that I can find the cause
All it takes are a few mistakes
So how can I be sure

What if I fall, what happens next What if my foundation was a thought out of context No power in a process that leaves me in the dark So I'll just go with what I know It's written on my heart

But thought it's late in the day

Chorus:

I know I'll find my way soon
Show me a place in the sun
Cause somewhere on the journey
Is the strength to go on.
So let the dark fade
Show me a break in the cloud
Cause every day I'm waiting
Brings me one degree down

But thought it's late in the day

Chorus:

I know I'll find my way soon
Show me a place in the sun
Cause somewhere on the journey
Is the strength to go on.
So let the dark fade
Show me a break in the cloud
Cause every day I'm waiting
Brings me one degree down

(Solo)

I feel this inclination leading me to doubt my destination I used up all my patience all the time I waited at the station

I don't want to break the sky
I'm not going to come back down
I don't want to lose my mind
I'm too far gone to turn back now

I can't avoid the feeling
Maybe all the signs could be misleading
With all my senses reeling
When I saw my dreams all hit the ceiling

I don't want to break the sky
I'm not going to come back down
I don't want to lose my mind

I'm too far gone to turn back now

No need for reflecting on why it took so long No need for rejecting this road I'm walking on No point reminiscing on things I can't repair All it takes a few good breaks and suddenly I'm there

But thought it's late in the day

Chorus:

I know I'll find my way soon
Show me a place in the sun
Cause somewhere on the journey
Is the strength to go on.
So let the dark fade
Show me a break in the cloud
Cause every day I'm waiting
Brings me one degree down
