In Two Glasses Of Wine

Tilly and the Wall

I can feel them come back around The slow migration of our hearts Back to our empty chests When we know there's nothing left to win back Our love picks up slowly in the night It slides across dirty bedroom smiles Lift up your head so the sun can catch your eyes No, I wouldn't leave you for a sadder song No, I wouldn't leave you for a shoulder to lean on No, I wouldn't leave you for a circle to live long
