The Woman's Boat

Toni Childs

Ooh now, I am a woman And you are a man I was born different from you On this earth we both stand

Now, as a daughter
I have learned rules and laws
What to say and not to say
What's acceptable to be called

In the woman's boat
On the woman's sea
They are calling us
They are calling us to sea

And yes, I have my worries About the human race You see my breasts are aching And I hope it's not too late

For the woman's boat On the woman's sea They are calling us And they're calling me

How the seasons change?
They rock and they rage
Will I please allow the thunder
And the birth inside of me?

Now, do you believe in powers Like the human and the seed? And how evolution happens How the whirlpool spins in me?

Oh, grandmother tell us your secrets Your stories passed down through the years Could I really believe it? Is there something happening here?

In the woman's boat
On the woman's sea
Is there something hidden
Something to see

Oh, the seasons change They're rocky and they rage Will I please allow the thunder And the birth inside of me?
