Almost Rosey

Tori Amos

Just a minute of your time Yes I've been known to delude myself So let me put those rose Colored glasses to the test

Now is this real enough for you 'cause blondes here don't jump out of cakes If that never impressed you much

Come board this lunatic express

Just why do they say
Have a nice day anyway
We both know they wouldn't mind

If I just curled up and died
Let's not give that one a try
Chin up put on a pair of these roseys
Raise those blinds
Chin up a happy mask was never
Your best disguise
Chin up put on a pair of these roseys
In no time you will feel almost fine

Almost rosey

Now some girls here will huddle with No not footballers that are rich But will confide in small white sticks He bats as The Virginian Slim

Then I tried once to comply With an authority that would Subsidize my wild side But at this altar was sacrificed

Yes you can laugh a femme fatale In a bride's dress now married to The effortlessness of the cracks That lie now in between the facts

Now about when violet died The cause still unidentified She thought her love would be enough But you can't seduce seduction

Her tentacles of endless want Reach through my corridors And tempt me to taste of her power I sober with the witching hour

And when I hear of one more bomb Yes we have all been robbed of song And nightingales who throw their arms up When is enough enough?
