

What You See In Her

Trent Dabbs

those eyes cut faster than a pair of scissors words thrown around like you never listen ooooh, oooh, ooooooh so target, aim, drive for your heart you think you're good at love but you know you aren't don't tell me you're in love you used to laugh at what you have become if i have no right to say if you were me, would you do differently?

i'm sorry if it's unkind
the love it must be blind cause i don't know what you see in her understated over-dramatize constant questions never satisfy

ooooh, oooh, ooooooh

but the way you smiled at every average guy the benefit of the doubt has died ooooh, oooh, ooooooh

if you were me, would you do differently?

and nothing change but time you need to see it through different light cause i don't know what you see in her

i don't know what you see in her
in her
in her
