

Start today tomorrow

The summer rain is falling like its never going to stop, it's been ages
Puddles form on city corners, businessmen they leap between the edges
Umbrellas take up battle spots but nature's fury always proves much stronger
I've been sitting in my room wondering if I'm going to last much longer

I've been so damn sure that I've been here before.
I'll give back what I borrowed and start today tomorrow

I've been watching over you, watching while you're sleeping
Visions slowly come to me of you when you were sixteen
Standing in your neighbour's house, like the ones I've shown you
Sometimes I get the feeling that I've always known you

I've been so damn sure that I've been here before.
I'll rise above my sorrow
And start today tomorrow

The rain's gone, here come the swallows
Let's start today tomorrow
